the Connecticut Power Co., of New London, must pay the bill of Dr. George P. Cheney of that city for medical advices rendered to Austin Dorr, an employe of the company. Dorr was at work setting poles on October 6, 1920, in Montville when he scratched himself with some brush from which infection followed. The doctor treated him for followed. The doctor treated him for reliuletis. From the evidence it was found hat the employe reported his injury and that the respondent raised no ob-jection to the medical services being rendered and did not offer to provide their own physician. In view of these facts it is found that the bill rendered by Dr. Cheney is in order and is a bill which the respondent company is responsible for under the act.
